

When your name is Interactive Intelligence, your choice of location better be smart

Interactive Intelligence is a leading developer of interaction management software that helps automate virtually every aspect of business communications—an innovation that has received prestigious awards from software giants like Microsoft to industry publications like Byte Magazine and Red Herring. Its marketplace is worldwide, but home is Indiana. Surprised? Truth is, Indiana offers a pipeline of IT graduates, low taxes, training grants and other business incentives, not to mention a great lifestyle. Given all that, Indiana is a choice you'd expect from a company that has "intelligence" in its name. For more information, click on www.indianacommerce.com.
